Questions and Discussion:

After the presentation by Mr Hayashi, the following concerns were raised by the participants;

- The increase for some countries in recent years has been dramatic.. It is very difficult to justify this increase to the Finance departments of government and ask for increases which are so high.
- The current formula goes against certain countries, who have a small population.
- The increases in Europe are between 1 and 5% is there any way to make the increases gradual? What is Europe's formula?
- Some developed countries in anti-doping keep the same amount of payment annually, whilst some developing countries are now required to pay almost the same amount, which does not seem to be fair.
- Financial contributions to the international organizations are normal however, it is not clear what benefits we are getting based on this current formula.

Following the discussion, Mr Hayashi provided the following information and explanations:

- Any decision regarding contributions and the policy of how it is agreed should come from the Asian governments, not from WADA and he encouraged the participants to make proposals.

Participants made the following suggestions:

- To appoint a small committee to examine the issues and make a recommendation to the next Intergovernmental meeting;
- To keep a fixed amount for contribution each year by a country, with only the annual WADA budget increase added as necessary;
- To review the formula and find a new one from 2012
- To change the indicator (Economic & Sport) and/or each weighting

NB: There were some requests to review the formula for the 2011 contributions, however, it was recommended and finally agreed that the current formula for 2011 be kept due to the resolution of Amman meeting last year.

Conclusion:

The agreements reached were as follows:

- Keep the current contribution formula and the amounts shown in the spreadsheet for 2011;
- Establish a finance committee to examine appropriate funding formulas and make a recommendation to the 8th Intergovernmental Meeting in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia in 2011. The committee to be composed of the Chairs of the RADO's in Asia and the WADA Foundation Board members with the secretariat provided by the WADA Asia/Oceania Regional Office
- Encourage non-paying countries to contribute to WADA;
